Today's Program – Cindy Johnson, Chestnut Square

Chestnut Square Historic Village is celebrating its 35th year in 2008. A hidden jewel, Chestnut Square represents a link to the heritage of Collin County. With structures representing the key developmental phase of McKinney's history from 1850 through 1930, Chestnut Square's Living History programs bring Collin County history to life for McKinney families and school children throughout the year. In the late 1990's Dallas spent $12 million to create their own historic village in downtown Dallas....over the past five years Frisco has spent $7 million plus to recreate a historic village near their new Town Hall. Chestnut Square is a gift that nine ladies presented to McKinney in 1973....35 years later it's a vibrant community center that offers facility rentals, weddings, Farmers' Market, Living History Days, summer camps and school tours. You need to know about what's happening at Chestnut Square!

Today's Thoughts in Honor of ....

Bad Poetry Day- August 18

In science one tries to tell people, in such a way as to be understood by everyone, something that no one ever knew before. But in poetry, it's the exact opposite.

- Paul Dirac 1902 - 1984

Many brave men lived before Agamemnon; but all are overwhelmed in eternal night, unwept, unknown, because they lack a sacred poet.

- Horace 65 BC – 8 BC

A young ventriloquist is touring the clubs and one night he's doing a show in a small town in Arkansas. With his dummy on his knee, he start going through his usual dumb blond jokes when a blond woman in the 4th row stands on her chair and starts shouting:

"I've heard enough of your stupid blond jokes. What makes you think you can stereotype women that way? What does the color of a person's hair have to do with her worth as a human being? It's guys like you who keep women like me from being respected at work and in the community and from reaching our full potential as a person. Because you and your kind continue to perpetuate discrimination against not only blonds, but women in general . . . and all in the name of humor!"

The embarrassed ventriloquist begins to apologize, and the blond yells, "You stay out of this mister! I'm talking to that little meanie on your lap! "

Major Donor seeks no special recognition

Richard Barton stands at the street intersection, waving his sign and shouting encouragement for runners helping to raise funds for a cancer care center.

Hours later, he's still there, cheering on the walkers, some of whom are cancer patients. He's been up since dawn on this October morning.

Barton's framed portrait hangs in the Hall of Honor on the 17th floor of Rotary International's World Headquarters, among the other US$1 million donors. His was the 28th such gift in Rotary's history.

But if Barton, a member of the Rotary Club of Hinsdale, Illinois, USA, had his way, no one would ever hear about his donation. Friends say he quietly volunteers for nearly every Rotary project that comes along and never seeks special recognition.

Rich was eager to get involved from the moment he first joined, says Rotarian Charlie Hartley. "Every time we had something going on, he volunteered to help. Rich is always saying, 'What can I do now?'"

Working-class upbringing

Barton never expected to be in a position to give a million dollars to anyone. He grew up in a working-class neighborhood, where his father was a sheet-metal worker, and was the first in his family to attend college.

With a civil engineering degree from the University of Illinois in 1964, he found a job building missile silos for American Bridge, a division of U.S. Steel. He wasn't thrilled at the prospect of moving from Chicago to North Dakota, where the company was based. He was excited, though, at the idea of being a field commander responsible for making sure the doors on 150 silos were properly installed and balanced so finely you could push them into place with a finger.

That job led to promotions that put Barton's stamp on some of the most recognizable buildings in the world. In Chicago, he was the construction engineer for the John Hancock Center, the Gateway Center, and the First National Bank Building (now called Chase Tower). He also worked on the World Trade Center in New York and the world's first welded-steel tower, the General Motors building. Later, he spent many years building roads and bridges, including many of those spanning U.S. Interstate 55, a highway that leads out of Chicago.

Now 65, Barton is the owner of RB Properties in Burr Ridge, Illinois, a property management and acquisition firm. Much of his real estate sites are "unloved" older buildings that "just need a little care and attention to be profitable," Barton says.

Barton's million-dollar gift was intended to benefit both Jane Hopson, his partner, and Rotary – "the two most important things in my life." And he wanted it to be as simple as possible. His attorney recommended that he set up a charitable remainder trust, providing tax benefits to the couple now, but also to their estate after they are gone.
